Dear Josh:

Many thanks for your note on the flying camera. I somehow had missed that squib. I probably was away when that particular issue came across my desk.

I have started the machinery to try to find out about the spectrometer that flew as well as the results that may have been forthcoming. This I have done both through Washington, London and Oxford.

It also turns out that a similar operation is underway through the Weather Bureau and we are now trying to discover just what has occurred there.

Greetings and very truly yours,

Melvin Calvin
